Sink hole opens on Deming Way

by Arlene Surprenant
A large sinkhole which maintenance man Ed Melanson suspects has been growing for a period of time, was discovered Tuesday under the driveway of one of the apartments at Deming Way.

Melanson, who said the discovery was made when a shovel went right through the grass to a hollow area in the ground, estimates it will take two days to replace leaking water pipes in the hole and clean up the area.

According to housing authority member, Bill Strob, this is the fourth such leak at the elderly housing complex in the past year. Members have already replaced similar leaking pipes with copper ones at an approximate cost of $10,000.

"There will be more (leaks)," predicted Strob, as he explained, once one pipe is replaced and the area is sealed up pressure builds until a new leak sprouts. Money for the new pipes is expected to come from the Emergency Modernization Fund.

Environmental report will be required

by Arlene Surprenant
A full Environmental Impact Report (EIR) is required on the 22.5 acre site proposed for the Wilmington Aboretum Apartment complex. The decision was handed down July 24 by James Hoyte, secretary of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, following a flurry of letters demanding the report from residents, town boards, and the environmental consulting firm IEP.

IMG, developers of the project, will be required to provide the state with information on traffic impact, air quality, and drainage. IMG will also have to outline how the project will meet the standards of wetland regulations, options for sewage disposal, the impact on the available water supply, and aesthetic features designed to buffer the project from adjacent residences.

A public comment period will follow submission of the report by IMG and a review from the state.

Reportedly, Thomas Bracken of Bracken and Baram, the environmental attorney representing approximately 150 neighbors and abutters to the property, will be submitting a letter to the state's Environmental Protection Agency covering additional areas he feels should be addressed in the report. These include effect on water quality, impact on birds and wildlife on the site, and noise pollution.

High school renovations

Heat is on to open on time

by Arlene Surprenant
Eleventh hour pressure to finish up the original scope of renovation work at Wilmington High school coupled with additional work and change orders is being felt on all sides, judging from some locked horns at a Permanent Building Committee meeting Monday night.

Following a walking tour of the building to ascertain what still needs to be done before school opens September 8, members of the PBC, school officials, and representatives of the contracting firm Sciaba Construction Corporation went over the timeframe and raised several pertinent questions.

One problem reiterated by several people during the tour appears to be a lack of manpower. According to Project Manager Paul Scheipers, they are experiencing some shortage of labor because of "the economy in the area and availability of tradesmen."

"I thought we would have seen a significant increase in manpower, a doubling up in shifts, or whatever it would take to get things done," said PBC member Diane Allan, who played Devil's Advocate much of the night.

Scheipers assured Allan there has been some increase in manpower and the school will open on time. He did point out, however, that the scope of work has increased by 50 percent, creating some difficulty for the contractor.

When Allan pressed Scheipers to tell the school committee "what level of completion" they can expect since committee members have to decide whether to go with the September 8 opening date at their August 13 meeting, Scheipers bristled.

"If the committee is not satisfied then I hope they tell me...and I'll do my contract work and leave the other areas alone. Then it becomes your problem...We're trying to accomplish a goal to satisfy everybody (and) it means a sacrifice on everybody's part," said Scheipers.

School committeeman Mitchell Spiris told Scheipers "I don't like this attitude; if you don't do it my way, I'm going to pick up my ball and go home." He went on to explain that school officials have been getting calls from parents inquiring about the opening date.

Spiris added, however, that he was "optimistic" over the contractor's assurance that the building would be ready. As long as it's "legal and safe" and the rooms are clean, said Spiris, he saw no reason not to open on time.

Superintendent Robert Horan also expressed optimism, though he pointed out that inspections still have to be made by the Wilmington Fire Dept, the Building Inspector, and others to obtain various permits before doors are allowed to open.

On the off chance that school doesn't open on time, said Horan, options would include school attendance during vacations, on Saturdays, and extending school to June 30 next year. In any event, elementary and junior high schools would open on time and staff and the bus company would still be paid, under the terms of their contract, from the original opening date.

Scheipers reiterated his claim that with the first completion date set for August 11 and the cleaning force expected then, school would be ready for occupancy September 8.

"I believe Sciaba Construction has shown good faith," he said, pointing out that $300,000 worth of additional work is going to be completed within the original timeframe with "not one day of extension."

"Our reputation is at stake," Scheipers added. No one disputed that.

Hazardous waste under roadway may alter bridge plans

State plans to rebuild the New Boston Street bridge in North Woburn have run into problems due to possible hazardous waste in the area.

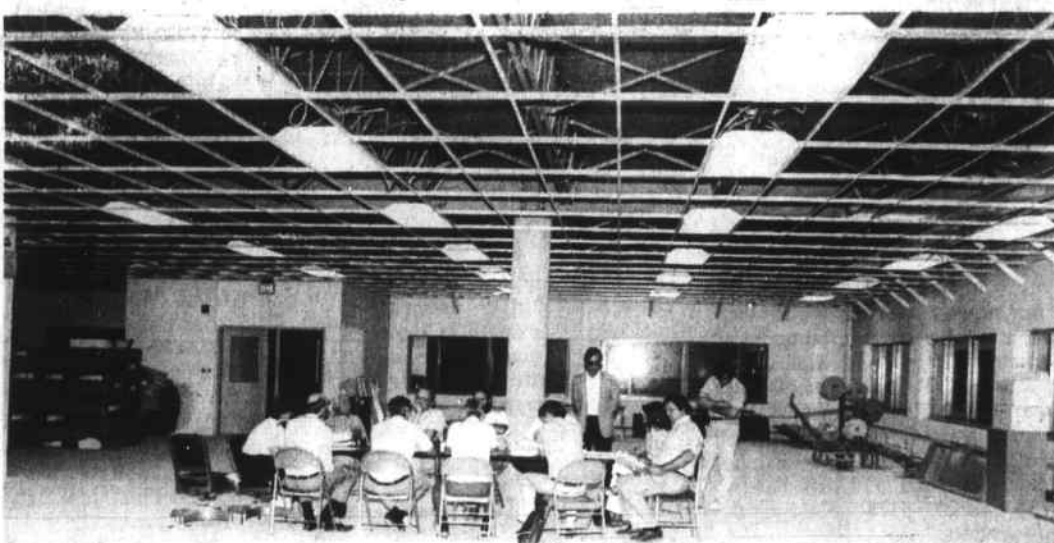

A story in Monday's Daily Times/Chronicle reported that Mass. DPW Commissioner Robert Tierney said the scope of the job has been scaled back because there are signs of hazardous waste under the existing road south of the bridge. Because the state does not want to disturb any hazardous waste, there will be no realignment of that section of the road.

The New Boston Street bridge connects to Woburn Street in Wilmington. There are a few Woburn businesses north of the bridge which can be reached only through Wilmington.

Since the bridge was torn down in 1978, the city of Woburn has been lobbying the state to have it rebuilt. Meanwhile, Wilmington officials have been lobbying to keep it closed, due to residents' fears of Woburn traffic using Woburn Street as a short cut to Route 93. Wilmington officials have been able to secure an agreement to hold off on construction of a new bridge until the state begins construction on improvements to Route 129 (Lowell Street) in Wilmington.

Both projects are presently at the 75 percent design stage. Work should get underway in the summer of 1987.

PBC meeting

The Permanent Building Committee met in the new high school cafeteria Monday evening, after a tour of the building. The yet-to-be finished ceiling has modifications in the sprinklers which will cost an extra $10,000.

Health & Fitness

Greater Lowell YMCA

The Merrimack Valley United Fund has granted funding to the Greater Lowell Family YMCA to provide, in collaboration with Lowell General Hospital, a phase IV Cardiac rehabilitation program for Merrimack Valley residents.

Beginning in September, the program will provide progressive and maintenance exercises for those who have coronary artery disease, who have had heart attacks, by-pass surgery, or those who are high potential risks for heart disease.

Exercises will be led by YMCA health fitness director Lance Granger three times a week, with cardiac nurse Joanne Reynolds from Lowell General Hospital present to assist participants with heart rate checks, blood pressure readings, and general activity guidance.

Each hour long session will include check in procedures, warm up exercises, a cardiovascular activity period, and a cool down period. Cardiovascular activity will utilize a combination of walking, jogging, stationary bicycling, rowing and step-ups on a specially designed bench. Individual routines will be determined by physician exercise prescription, based on the participant's stress test.

Recently passed state legislation has mandated reimbursement for cardiac rehabilitation program by all health insurance carriers, offering the benefits of optimal well-being to a maximum number of individuals.

The admittance to the program is upon personal physician referral, and application packets may be obtained by calling the YMCA at 454-7828. The program begins September 22, 1986. For further information, contact the YMCA or Lowell General Hospital's Cardiac Rehabilitation Department at 937-6326.

McCue blew the first whistle

A gang that tried to take over the Massachusetts law enforcement establishment has been foiled, and it was Officer David McCue of Wilmington who blew the first whistle.

The present scandal surrounding several police officials allegedly selling and tampering with civil service exams has been years in the making. McCue has been following the matter since 1978.

In the fall of that year, McCue received a call from a sergeant of the Metropolitan Police. McCue had served on that department in the early 1970's, and then transferred to Wilmington. He has been a patrolman on the Wilmington Police Dept. for 13 years.

Sgt. Francis Thorpe offered McCue a copy of the sergeants' civil service exam. McCue reported the offer to then town manager Sterling Morris, who in turn contacted Town Counsel Alan Altman. McCue was put in touch with the state attorney general's office.

When he met with Thorpe, McCue was wearing a "bug". Thorpe was arrested as a result, and later pleaded guilty to attempted bribery.

Officer David McCue

McCue's knowledge of the civil service bribery, plus his familiarity with the personnel in the Metropolitan Police have finally paid off. Last week, a grand jury issued indictments against ten men, accusing them of conspiring to steal and sell civil service exams.

McCue was among the witnesses who testified before grand jury proceedings earlier this summer. Thorpe also testified, as did Gerald Clemente. Clemente, a former MDC police captain, turned state's evidence after being convicted of participating in the Depositors' Trust robbery in Medford.

It wasn't until the Depositors' Trust case was broken that McCue's information became valuable. McCue had known what was going on, but was not in a position where he could act on it.

Through manipulation of the civil service system, the police involved in the Depositors' Trust theft were allegedly able to place their men in positions where they could protect the men involved in breaking into the bank.

The situation has resulted in McCue receiving death threats. Some police viewed him as a "traitor" to the brotherhood. He also learned that his score had been lowered on a civil service exam he took.

McCue at one point served briefly as an acting sergeant, about the time of the incident with Thorpe. Two other men were promoted to sergeant at that time.

More indictments are expected as the case unfolds, and legal action is possible in other aspects of the case. Not only will there be criminal prosecutions of those suspected of taking part in the scam, but there will probably be civil actions as officers whose promotions were compromised sue for damages or another chance at the jobs regulated by civil service.

Rep. Beckwith's August office hours

State Representative Geoffrey C. Beckwith, who represents Reading, North Reading and Wilmington's precinct 3 in the Massachusetts House, this week announced the schedule for his August district office hours.

"A state representative must be accessible to everyone in his or her district," said Beckwith who holds regular office hours each month in order to make it easier for constituents to meet with him whenever they have a question or a problem concerning state government.

Beckwith will hold August office hours at two locations: on Thursday evening, August 7, he will be at the Flint Memorial Library on Bow Street in North Reading from 5:30 to 7; and on Thursday evening, August 7, he will be in the conference room of the Reading Public Library on Middlesex Avenue from 7:30 to 9.

"Interested citizens should never hesitate to get in touch with me any time," said Beckwith, who invited residents to call him at either his State House office (722-2430) or at home (944-5030). "But these office hours will provide everyone with an additional opportunity to see me personally and offer input, ask for information, or request assistance with a problem regarding state government."

Busy night at Tewks appeals

The corner of South Street and Main Street will see more changes in the near future, if the plans of owner Richard Proctor get approval in the Board of Appeals hearing scheduled for August 25.

Proctor has renewed and enlarged Sam's Store, which dates back from World War I days, and now has a three room combination of pizza parlor and general store. He now plans to change the house on the corner, and instead move in another building. The other building is the one which has stood at the corner of Main Street and Salem Street for over 50 years, and which has now been moved off its foundation.

Attorney Jay Gaffney will present the case to the Board of Appeals.

Another variance requested in the same area will be for the corner of South Street and Salem Street. Edward and Joanne Smith are requesting a special permit to have a second hand car lot on that corner. The area is located in a commercial district.

Doug Granfield seeks a variance to subdivide some land off Pleasant Street and to construct a home. It is in an area, he has pointed out, that will soon have sewer service.

John C. Sullivan, a Woburn resident, seeks to establish an in-law apartment at 41 Dike Court, off Cardigan Drive. Kevin Sullivan seeks to construct a home on a 10,000 foot lot off Westland Drive.

The construction is possible now, the board was told, because of sewer construction.

Warren B. Farwell seeks to cut off a 10,000 foot lot on property off Patricia Drive. He did not take a certified plot plan to the board meeting Monday night. He will have to have two copies for the hearing on August 25.

Eleanor and Alexander Salipante have a problem on Wolcott Drive. They had a variance granted them a year ago and staked out the new foundation. Then the concrete truck poured in the wrong direction, and the foundation is in the wrong place. They will relate their problems to the appeals board on August 25. This will not be an amendment to the hearing of a year ago. It will be a brand new hearing.

The Board of Appeals is starting the new year with a bang. There will be a total of 30 hearings on August 25. Peter Downing is now the chairman and Laura Stella is to be the clerk for the board.

Sam's store

Store owner Richard Proctor went before the Tewksbury Board of Appeals this week with changes for the house on the corner of Main and South Streets.

Fun in the sun?

by Arlene Surprenant

Next year I'll pass on my summer vacation.

This past week, a week eagerly anticipated by our family as a time of relaxation and fun in the sun, was an unbelievable mix of sleep, rain, pinocle, rain, reading, rain, and one disaster on top of another. That's putting it mildly.

We should have known better as we left Wilmington in a steady deluge and traveled across the backroads of Vermont and New Hampshire. For six days we searched out the sparse rays of sun at beautiful Brant Lake in upstate New York. We lounged on the beach in between the down pours and fine mist that rolls in from the Adirondacks in the early morn.

We went fishing at 6 a.m. Or rather, my husband and his longtime friend Bob did as they roused themselves out of a sound sleep to catch the big one (that was never caught!). We went cruising in Bob's 20 foot outboard motor boat, basking in the shade and drinking in the unspoiled beauty of the surrounding mountains and choppy blue waters. We read mystery novels and a backlog of periodicals, gossiped with my parents and assorted relatives, and ate—a lot.

We also became part of the press of tourists shopping in Lake George as we dodged raindrops and children's pleas for "Another 10 dollars please."

When all else failed, we challenged all comers to pinocle after learning the fine points of the game and the meaning of such terms as meld, marriages, trump, and roundhouses. Actually, it wasn't all that bad because sometimes we won—by default.

While at Brant Lake, our peace was disturbed only twice: once by homefront news that our Siberian husky had broken his chain and was on the loose and again by a severe storm that blew out the electricity in my folks' trailer, causing a great sense of adventure on the part of our children and their friends.

I think, though, the part of our vacation I'll remember the most is our homecoming.

No sooner did we arrive home after a tortuous drive over steep mountain roads in yet another downpour (my husband decided to try a different route home) then we were greeted with several problems at once. The dog was now holed up in the garage and had to be tied on his run. The pool was a sickly shade of green. The refrigerator had gone off. And the downstairs bathroom floor was covered by a murky black mess, the result of a clog in the shower drain and an overflowing toilet bowl.

After summoning some expert help to unclog the drain and pump out a water logged full septic system, we breathed a sigh of relief. Or tried to. Any effort to unwind was quickly cut short by what I will herein after refer to as a stroke of fate. During a brief electric storm Saturday night, our cable and telephone lines were struck by an errant bolt of lightning that bounced off a tree across the street and came right for the window which I was struggling to close.

There's something that makes you thank the Powers that Be when lightning strikes so close you can reach out and touch it - and you escape unharmed. Even when you learn your two television sets are damaged, one permanently, and your living room drapes sport two burned holes as a result of sparks exploding in the light switches. even when you learn the next day that your furnace is no longer working and hot water is non-existent. Even when you learn your timers are burned out and must be replaced along with several other things in the house.

Even with all that, you have to feel thankful it wasn't worse.

Though my daughters and I are now back at work, my husband has yet another week off to enjoy some free time around his green pool. Probably in the rain. So what else is new?

Boarding a ship was rarely done

Copyright © 1986
by Capt. Larz Neilson

The paper on July 30 related the story of how the crew of a US Navy APD "boarded" and captured a Japanese battleship in the last days of World War II. The story was about 'Al Marfleet, of Boutwell Street, Wilmington.

To "board" a ship is to have the crew capture that ship in a direct assault, in the same manner as John Paul Jones treated the ships he encountered during the American Revolution. Boarding is a direct, physical assault of another vessel. It happened only twice in the U.S.

The old becomes the new at WHS

by Arlene Surprenant

Rooms were an odd mix of the old and new, the finished and incomplete.

Old ceilings and scarred floors mixed with new shelving and spanking fresh coats of paint. Newly created rooms outshone older classrooms in a suspended state of renovation. Two freshly installed vaulted skylights in the corridor between the new gym and cafeteria and the latest smoke alarms, which spin and flash to aid the hearing impaired, stand out among exposed wires, old fixtures, and plastic covered windows. Overall, a layer of dust and piled construction materials makes you wonder if it will ever get done.

There is, however, an underlying sense of urgency as workmen move steadily toward their goal of a newly renovated Wilmington High School by the fall. There is also anticipation, excitement, and confidence that there is, indeed, a light at the end of the tunnel.

All this was in evidence during an extended tour of the building on Monday night.

As members of the Permanent Building Committee, school department, the town manager, and others followed architect Wilson Rains and Project Manager Paul Scheipers through the confusion, it was obvious much had been accomplished in a few short months.

For instance, where art students were once taught in a former storage closet, they now will be located in airy attached rooms with rows of shelves to hold supplies. Where music students once occupied cramped quarters on the first floor, they will now move to a suite of carpeted, soundproofed rooms including practice areas, storage rooms, and a main room with risers for both band and chorus. A new concept sees the development of five teacher work areas scattered throughout the building where students can meet with instructors during free periods.

There is an open feeling in the new metals, electronics, and graphic arts shops, located where the old gym once stood (and even retaining part of the old floor), thanks to an unusual steel truss ceiling. There is a spacious, beautifully landscaped cafeteria gleaming with a metal kitchen service area and a partially finished drop ceiling. There is a larger library with curved ceilings and cement stanchions supporting it all.

You are told approximately three classrooms a day are being painted and the 30 year old lockers in various stages of disrepair will be rehabbed and painted shades of deep green, blue and rust. You are told the biggest area of work remains on the floors where torn tiles and scratches from moving equipment back and forth stand out. General cleanup will begin next week and the town will begin moving equipment and furnishings back in place for the opening of school.

According to a general consensus, the outlook is optimistic. As one tour member enthused, "it's really impressive." Considering everything, it really is.

Floor art The floor of the former art room at Wilmington High School is covered with chipped floor tiles, presently being removed. A new tile floor will be installed.

Survey says Reading has lowest light bills

A recent survey of residential electric rates shows the Reading Municipal Light Department (RMLD) to have the lowest monthly bills for public or private Massachusetts utilities over the past 12 months at 500 KWH level.

John H. Crooker, chairman of the Reading Municipal Light Board (RMLB) said, "The average residential customer in the Reading system consumes approximately 500 KWH per month. The survey, conducted by the Massachusetts Municipal Wholesale Electric Company shows RMLD ranks second and third lowest at the 250 and 750 KWH levels respectively. The survey includes 35 municipals and all seven of the Commonwealth's private electric utilities."

The RMLB also announced that the fuel charge for August has been reduced to 1.75 cents per KWH down from 2.5 cents in July and 2.75 cents in June. "The lower fuel charge is attributed to favorable purchases of fossil generation, use of natural gas at our Stony Brook unit, purchases of nuclear generation from New Brunswick and Millstone III, and hydro purchases from the Niagara River," added Crooker.

The RMLB announced that the residential credit for the purchase of hydro electricity from the New York Power Authority was set at $7.77 for August bills. According to RMLD's General Manager Norbert D. Rhinerson, "each of Reading's residential customers has saved $85.75 during the first year of the New York Power Authority purchase."

Navy during World War II.

In the first instance the crew of a small aircraft carrier, commanded by Captain Dan Gallery boarded the German submarine U 505, in mid Atlantic, just as that submarine was being sunk by its crew. The American seamen succeeded in keeping that submarine afloat, and it is now on exhibition in Chicago, Illinois.

The second instance, of course, was the capture of the Japanese battleship Nagato.

The writer has a story - not of boarding enemy ships, but of the sinking of a Japanese mine, which might at this time prove to be of interest.

In December 1945 the Chanute Victory, a US Troopship, was sent to Japan, to transport U.S. soldiers (troops) home to the United States. The Chanute embarked 1600 US soldiers in Yokohama, in the last days of January 1946, and sailed for Portland, Oregon.

The route was chosen to be along the 40th parallel of latitude - not too far north. It was winter in the North Pacific, and winter storms can be rather tough.

The Japanese, during the last 18 months of the war, had been launching mines, with which they hoped to sink American ships. The mines, each with about 600 pounds of explosives, would float in the water, and if touched by a ship would explode, and thus sink the ship (or nearly so).

The idea of the Japanese Navy, in launching those mines, is that they would float across the Pacific, to the coasts of Oregon and Washington, and there sink American ships. There is a current in the Pacific (the Kuro Shiro) which is very similar to the Gulf Stream in the Atlantic, and it was on that current that the Japanese were counting.

Consequently every allied vessel was warned to be alert, and to avoid striking any Japanese mines. Those mines were difficult to see, black in color, and exposed only a few inches above the surface of the water.

But the Radar, on the American ships could detect the mines. On the Chanute the radar was constantly probing the water, seeking Japanese mines, as the ship made its way to Portland, Oregon.

One morning, at about six o'clock, in mid Pacific, the radar detected a mine. The decision was made to sink that mine, which would not be difficult.

The Chanute had eight Bofors machine guns, 20 millimeter. To shoot directly at the mines would do no good. The idea was to aim the Bofors at the water close to the ship, and then "lift" the site gradually, so as to cause a trace of bullets in the water, as the machine gun was firing. That trace could then be aimed directly at the mine.

The firing started at about 6 a.m. The reaction - well, it was something out of this world.

Within 30 seconds 1,600 US soldiers were on deck, to see what was going on. If there were any guns to be fired they wanted to know what.

None of them were dressed. In fact many were completely without clothing. But they all saw the machine gun bullets hit that mine, and the mine sink slowly below the waves of the Pacific. It was quite a sight, the soldiers, not the mine.

The mine did not blow up. That couldn't happen unless one of the detonators, made for ships to strike, was hit. And, with only machine gun bullets no detonators were struck.

And then the soldiers went below decks again, and got dressed.

Conservative survey results

For political purposes Tewksbury and Wilmington are considered to be Democratic communities. Democrats are to be described, in Massachusetts as "liberals," people with a free spending attitude and a penchant for "underdog" legislation.

Last week State Rep. Miceli published the results of his latest survey among the voters of Tewksbury and Wilmington. The survey had been made among persons who were present at town meetings.

The results were surprising. There was no "liberal" outlook. The voters can almost be described as being hardshell conservatives.

Eighty-eight percent were in favor of a cap on state spending. This, in towns that Miceli represents, and for which he has obtained a lot of state funds. Tewksbury, a town with limited finances, has found these funds to be very helpful.

Also to be noted is that 73 percent were in favor of capital punishment, 71 percent wanted stricter drunk driving laws, and 69 percent voted against casino gambling in Massachusetts.

That is a conservative outlook.

One can also remark that 77 percent were in favor of changes in the medical malpractice laws and that 52 percent were not in favor of the seat belt laws.

There are many persons who do not attend town meetings, particularly in Tewksbury. To have a five percent turnout in that town is pretty good, in town meeting.

What would the results have been if the vote had been taken at a time of state or national elections?

The August 10, 1961 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

The sale of Unit Packet Corp and its affiliate Packet Products of Burlington Avenue to Diamond Crystal Salt was announced in St. Clair, Michigan.

Water department workers were pictured in a 16 foot trench at the lower end of Woburn Street where they were connecting the MDC sewer to the Wilmington sewer. Connection was expected to be complete by the end of the week.

An advertisement for a salad luncheon advised readers to contact Mrs. Donald Hill or Mrs. Carl Bachman for reservations. Susie's Sonnet:

Down the hatch
Fidel Castro, the buccaneer,
Is convinced he has no peer.
I predict, though I'm no seer,
Fidel will yet weep in his beer.

The planning board approved a figure of $75,000 for a proposed bond to be filed by Edsel Tocci of Watertown to guarantee the completion of Woodland Road off Lowell Street.

Charles Algrove Jr., of Woburn Street was visiting relatives in England.

Weinberg's was advertising top value stamps - "add to the value of merchandise purchased at Weinberg's in Wilmington Center."

Lee Chisholm of Andover Street, owner of a sporting goods store in Malden, donated a cup to be awarded to the winner of the Wilmington Softball League.

Pictured was the Bill Durkee Cup, donated by Chisholm and the Town Crier Cup still unawarded to the top team at the end of regular playoffs when Gildarts and the Merrimacks were tied.

A farewell cookout was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cutter of Cedar Street for their son Ronald, Jr. who enlisted in the Navy. The 1961 graduate of WHS was employed by Unit Packet.

Plans for Alderwood Estates between Woburn and West Streets were filed by Edsel Tocci.

Ricky Shurtleff of Woburn Street and his cousin Danny Lowe (visiting from Virginia) were pictured surveying a pile of rock. Ricky's father wanted broken up to make way for a new driveway.

Ernie's Super Gas, (Ernie Brabant, prop.) 127 Main Street was advertising the fuel at 26.9 cents a gallon.

Past Commander James Shine and Vice Commander James Simpson of William Tattersall Chapter DAV were named Deputy Chiefs of Staff to State Commander Boyd C. Bowers at the same time Commander Clarence Mans was named an aide to the state commander.

Fees will pay wire inspector

The details for paying the wiring inspector were worked out at this week's meeting of the Tewksbury Board of Selectmen, after the pay was changed from salary to a "fee basis" at the last town meeting.

Appearing before the board was wire inspector Jerry Delaney, a professional electrician licensed in both Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Delaney went to the selectmen to suggest that his payment be based upon 50 percent of the inspection fee collected by the town. He said he looked into the pay schedules of the wire inspectors in other towns before approaching the selectmen.

The job of inspecting all of the new wiring in town is time consuming, he told the selectmen, and he spent more than 1,000 hours at the job last year. Delaney said his time is divided between large, professional jobs and townsfolk doing their own electrical work.

"A lot of homeowners buy a handyman book and try to wire their new porch or something," Delaney told the board. He said he occasionally helps homeowners with their wiring, but usually just advises them or inspects their work.

And the homeowners often do very good work, he said.

The only wiring inspector in town, Delaney began the job in December of 1984 and was recently reappointed by the selectmen for another one-year term.

Delaney said he enjoys the position, though there are usually a number of telephone messages waiting for him when he gets home from his regular job.

"Right now construction is booming," he said. "Every night there is a certain workload."

The selectmen voted to pay Delaney at 50 percent of the fee collected by the town. The change to a fee-paid basis amounts to a substantial raise for the wire inspector.

The change to a fee-paid basis was approved by voters at the special town meeting held on June 16 of this year.

Van flips

A couple planning to be married on Saturday was involved in an accident at Glen Road and King Street in Wilmington about 9:30 p.m. Tuesday. James Hanlon of 63 Lake St., Tewksbury and Annamie Lessard of Lynn escaped serious injury when their Chevy Astro van was hit broadside by a Ford Mustang which came out of King Street Extension. The van was hit just behind the driver's door, causing it to hit a pole, then a curb, and flip over. The driver of the Mustang was Helen Smith of Radcliffe Road, Billerica.

Spurrell joins in naval review

Prayer To The Holy Spirit

Oh Holy Spirit, thou who are all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who giveth me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life art with me. I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound.

My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.)

Rep. Miceli is candidate for re-election

Representative James Miceli has formally announced his decision to seek re-election as state representative from the Twentieth Middlesex District, which includes Tewksbury and Wilmington.

In making his announcement, Rep. Miceli said, "I have been proud to have had the opportunity to serve as your representative for five terms. In that time I have tried to honestly represent your interests within the State House. As you may know, often times that is easier said than done. There are many pressures and conflicting interest groups on Beacon Hill all advocating their particular cause. I have always believed that I can successfully function as a representative without undo obligations to the power brokers. I have worked hard to reduce taxes, cut excess government spending and increase state aid to municipalities.

"My efforts have not gone unnoticed. This past year I received a 'Legislator of the Year' award from the Mass. Association of Vocational School Administrators for my successful efforts in amending the state budget in order to curtail any further increased assessment upon towns such as Tewksbury and Wilmington.

"While a member of the legislature, I have also received the 'Legislator of the Year' award given by the Mass. Municipal Association and have been cited by Citizens for Limited Taxation.

"I am especially proud of my accomplishments which directly affect my district. The construction and pending installation of traffic signals at the intersection of North Street and Rte. 133 in Tewksbury and Federal Street and Middlesex Avenue and High Street and Rte. 62 in Wilmington. During this session I also obtained a $280,000 ladder truck for Tewksbury and had special legislation enacted which reduced the total cost of the Wilmington High School renovation by $1,800,000. In addition, I have worked hard to make sure my district obtained monies for housing, water filtration plants and similar projects.

"When Wilmington had its disastrous oil spill at the high school, I put through a special amendment which gave the town $475,000 for clean-up. I have always enjoyed working with and on behalf of our senior citizens and I was very pleasantly surprised when Wilmington's seniors dedicated their new senior citizen center in my honor.

"At the opening of this session, House Speaker George Keverian named me to be a member of the two most important house committees, the Committee on Ways and Means, which oversees all transactions concerning the finances of the Commonwealth, and the Rules Committee. I am the only house member from the greater Lowell area to be named to the Joint Committee on Legislative Redistricting, which is empowered to draw up new legislative districts this year.

"In conclusion, I have always felt that one of the most important and pleasurable aspects of my job is to make myself available to my constituents. Whether it be supporting a Little League or basketball team, working with local boards or holding monthly office hours, I have maintained my position as an active member of the district. If re-elected, I plan to continue in much the same manner as before. I intend to be an independent, yet effective, voice for the people of Tewksbury and Wilmington."

'On the run' with 'Buzz' Stapczynski

Authors Note: This is the first in a series of articles highlighting Wilmington's government officials and department heads. The series will be ongoing, as time and space permit.

by Arlene Surprenant

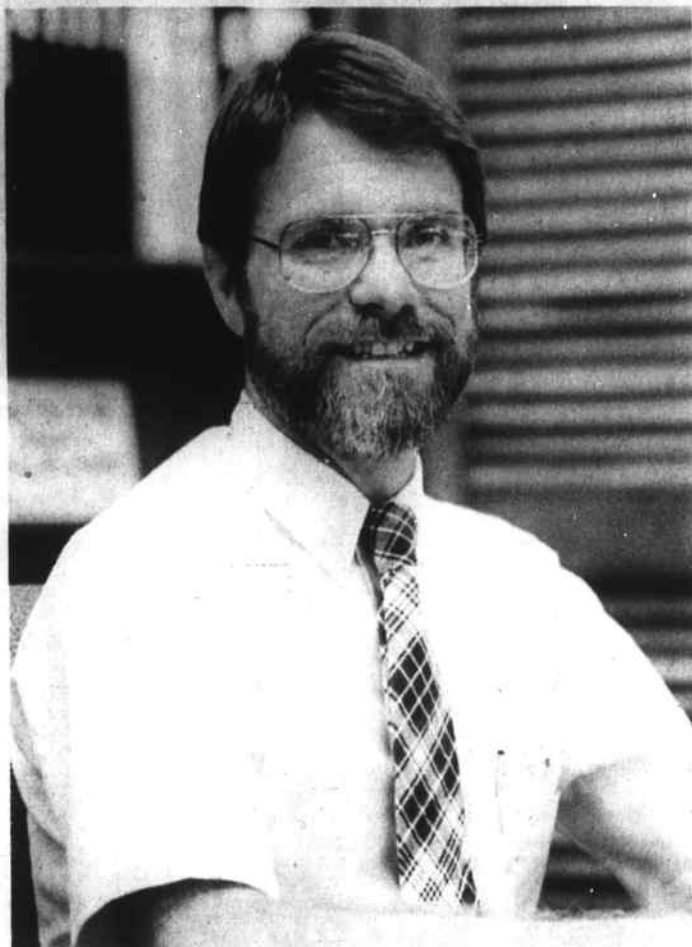

A typical day begins with an early morning jog. Then he will spend about an hour with one of his department heads and a good part of his day responding to selectmen's concerns. In between, he's on call to the general public, filling appointments set up by an efficient staff, doing paperwork in his office, or out in the field getting a handle on Wilmington's needs.

Though the day is over for most inhabitants of town hall at 4:30 p.m., his may continue to 6 p.m. to allow him to return a number of phone calls. After a supper break, he is back in the environs of the now familiar round building where he sits in on board meetings, sometimes until midnight, jotting down notes, offering observations, and recalling necessary facts and figures.

Being Wilmington's town manager is no easy task. Reginald (Buzz) Stapczynski carries it off with style.

Town manager for the past five years, Buzz is no stranger to government. In a recent interview in his airy, accessible office, Buzz tells of his childhood in Clawson, Michigan, a small town similar to Wilmington in size and spirit. There, both his parents as well as many of his family's friends are involved in local government, serving on such boards as the historical commission and library board.

Much of his growing up years were spent in parochial schools followed by a four year stint at Catholic University of America in Washington D.C. and two years at the University of Kansas. He graduated from the former with a BA in political science and from the latter with his Masters of Public Administration (MPA). It was while he was in Washington in the 1960's, during some "very active and turbulent years," that Buzz firmed up a decision to become

"part of the government process."

"I felt the fun and the action was in local government," Buzz says now, explaining his later decision to move from the federal and state levels. He adds that working for a town is "very gratifying" as you can see the results of your labor.

Prior to taking on jobs as Wilmington's assistant town manager to Sterling Morris and town manager, Buzz held others which prepared him well for the scope of his work here. His background includes positions as budget analyst in Fairfax County, Virginia; assistant to a municipal consultant in Danvers; and a worker in the Commonwealth's Department of Mental Health. He is also current chairman of the Massachusetts Municipal Association Task Force which works closely with the state DPW.

On this particular afternoon, we touch on the beginnings of Wilmington's town manager form of government. Buzz tells how originally three selectmen ran the whole town, an easier feat than now because of the town's smaller population. In the late 1940's there was "a groundswell movement" to reform the government leading to the present type of leadership.

"The town leaders had a sense of vision when they saw development spreading north and decided to leave the government to the professionals," Buzz explains, adding that Wilmington's government has "withstood the test of time."

"The town is a $30 million corporation," he continues, spelling out the need for professional management.

Most of his day to day decisions as town manager are governed by the budget, which Buzz refers to as "the goal setting document I live with the entire year." And he modestly gives much of the credit for Wilmington's "very good name all over the state" to his board of selectmen, which is responsible for re-appointing him every three years. Present board members seem to follow the dictates of such former selectmen as Aldo Cairra, Jim Banda and John Imbimbo, says Buzz, who always felt that "we can disagree, but not be disagreeable."

Wilmington's selectmen, past and present, take a team approach to problem solving, adds Buzz, which makes his job easier than it would otherwise be. The advantages of his job are many. With a thoughtful smile, Buzz enumerates on the interesting people he meets and works with, the variety of tasks he is asked to perform, and overcoming the challenges and problems that continually crop up.

Perhaps the job's biggest drawback is the accessibility and the fact that he's only a telephone call away.

"I know I have to be accessible but that's difficult to find two, or three hours to focus on a project," he says apologetically, quickly adding that being responsible to town citizens is important and part of his "self-imposed style."

"Right now, I'm in the process of trying to get a handle on my time and that's a constant battle," he explains.

Time, or the lack of it, makes it difficult for Buzz to pursue outside interests or spend much time with his new wife, Sandy. Though Sandy herself is involved with government work in her capacity as a municipal personnel consultant with the Massachusetts Municipal Association, she and Buzz occasionally squeeze in some time to take walks or bike rides together. Or they can often be found weekends scouring shops in Maine or New Hampshire for furnishings for their Glendale Circle home.

"I'm able, in most cases, to shut things off once I get home," says Buzz. Perhaps when he can't, his avocation for running helps him not only keep "fit and trim," but also relieves the stress of his demanding job. He spends at least an hour in the early mornings running along Wilmington's streets. This can be traced back to his high school and college days when he ran competitively and "fell into a sport for life."

Other forms of relaxation for this self-proclaimed "low key" man are perusals of magazines and local papers and "interaction" with fellow rotarians at local Rotary Club meetings.

He admits to having "high standards" which demand a lot, not only from himself, but from those who work for him. He laughs when asked if he takes those standards home with him. "Yes, I have no personal rip off when I get home."

Our conversation shifts to Wilmington once again. We talk, for instance, of priorities.

BLOWING THE ROOF OFF TAX SHELTERS

No one is sure where tax shelters will be when tax reform is in full effect, but the consensus is that the limited partnerships that borrow heavily to create substantial write-offs -- especially in real estate -- will be hard hit. Although first - and even second-home mortgage interest would continue to be deductible, other interest deductions would be limited.

Most frightening to investors about tax reform proposals was the possibility of retroactive changes that would take away benefits they thought were locked in when they put money into deals a year or two ago.

In addition, lowering tax brackets overall will limit the value of ANY deductions. Taxpayers in the 50 percent bracket were sharing deductible interest costs half and half with Uncle Sam last year; under lower tax brackets they could, in theory, be paying 75 percent -- or more -- themselves.

As always, look hard at any tax shelter offered to you. The best bets are those which do not bank heavily on interest write-offs except to balance current profits.

Before you invest, discuss the tax consequences with your accountant or

A 'big name' job?

Is there competition between Reading and Wilmington for having a town manager with a difficult-to-pronounce name?

If so, then Wilmington just lost. After five years of having Reginald "Buzz" Stapczynski as town manager, Wilmington residents are almost used to the name. Stap-chin-ski. Easy. That's why they call him Buzz.

Well, Reading has just adopted a town manager form of government. The selectmen seem to have just looked at Wilmington and decided that the most important thing in a town manager was an unpronounceable name. The man they hired is Peter Hechenbleikner.

Hechenbleikner, for those who know how the German language is supposed to be pronounced, pronounces his name just as if there was no letter "i" in it. That can be totally wrong to people who were brought up in that country.

But everyone calls him Peter, and forgets the last name. He has a background of solid service in New Jersey townships. He served as town planner in Pequannock and in South Brunswick, and then five years as manager of Plainsboro, New Jersey.

Royals' winner

Royals' pitcher Mike Kinnon hurled his team to the Tewksbury Town Championship with a superb performance in the title game.

Kinnon pitches Royals past Orioles

Mike Kinnon, pitcher for Tewksbury National Major League champions Royals, pitched a one-hit, 14 strikeout shutout to win the Major League town championship against the Tewksbury American Major League champion Orioles.

The Royals won the title with a 3-0 victory despite a great defensive effort by the Orioles who turned in two double plays in the first four innings to nullify a number of good scoring opportunities for the Royals.

The leadership of Mike Kinnon on the mound sparked the Royals to come through in the top of the fifth inning.

A single by Sean Bishop followed with doubles by Mike Kinnon and Chris Leone scored one run. And with two outs and men on second and third, a clutch double by Scott Ludwig scored two more runs giving the Royals a 3-0 lead.

Mike Kinnon then came out in the bottom of the fifth inning and struck out the side for the third time in the game. The Royals again threatened with bases loaded in the top of the sixth, but the Orioles held them off.

In the bottom of the sixth, the strong team play of the Royals that brought them this far closed the door for the Orioles and gained the Royals their first National League and Town Championship.

Prayer To The Holy Spirit

Oh Holy Spirit, thou who are all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who givest me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life art with me. I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound. My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. I should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be.) Publish this prayer, once grace attained. Grateful for Grace attained.

The first over-night during the second half of camp at Forty Acres was a great success. The day began with a pool party and then it was back to camp for a delicious cookout provided by the Sons of Italy. After supper games were played, a sing-along took place along with a treasure hunt and roasted marshmallows. The campers had no trouble falling asleep after such a busy day.

Daily activities include arts and crafts, quiet games, and special adventure. Other special activities and events included bowling, movies, Halloween and the weekly swim.

During the second half activities, campers will be participating in the Superstar Olympics with other local Special Needs Camps at the Tewksbury - Wilmington Elks. 'Sand, splash and safety at Burlington playground

By JIM ROUILLARD

They come to Burlington from at least as far afield as Chelsea, to land with a plop on the playground floor.

Because when you fall, you don't have very far to go.

And when you land, you land softly.

What brings kids and their parents from many surrounding towns to Burlington's Simonds Park?

Well, in three words, it just might be: sand, splash, and safety. It is also a firm confidence in the excellence of the Burlington playground.

The site at Simonds Park, on of several recreation facilities in the town which have earned high marks from residents and non-residents alike, may seem an unusual place to find peace of mind.

It is often full of pre-schoolers, after all, and that usually means noise. But the serenity is geared to the parents' conviction of the safety at the playground. And for their children, Simonds Park may go as far as any public or private recreational facility can — during the ramblousness that is part of a typical, healthy childhood — to insure enjoyable play and soundness of limb.

There is the cleanliness, for one thing — and the cushion of non-abrasive terrain to catch the toddler who tumbles from a pint-size see-saw onto the playground floor, which is neither packed dirt nor asphalt, but a soft, well-drained sand.

Chad Gaudette, for example, is a 19-month-old tot whose favorite pices of equipment at Simonds Park are "unfortunately all the climbers," according to his mother, Jody Gaudette. "The tall ones where he gets himself to the top and can't get off without falling."

Ms. Gaudette, who moved recently to Burlington from the Woburn-Winchester line, has seen playgrounds up and down much of the east coast — and she declares Burlington's particularly the one at Simonds Park, to be the finest in her experience.

The Pennsylvania native and Ivy League graduate met her husband, Billerica native Charles Gaudette, while both were students at UPenn.

"In Pennsylvania," she said, "we live right across the street from the playground, but that one was not as nice, or as safe as this. I think Burlington's are the nicest by far. They're better equipped, and safer for kids."

Oldest U.S. woman to have eye surgery Seeing clearly at 103

When 103 year-old Mae Hurlbutt made up her mind to have cataract surgery, she had no idea she might make medical history. Or that her zest for life might come to the attention of the White House.

"We believe she is the oldest person in the United States to have cataracts of both eyes removed and lens implanted," said her eye surgeon, Dr. Wilson Horsley of the Horsley Clinic in Stoneham.

"I will be talking about her for the rest of my career, not for that fact, but to spark people who have given up," said Dr. Horsley, who is only 35 years old.

"She is just brimming full of life," he said. "She has a stack of magazines she wants to read, an active interest in her church, and places she wants to see and visit. Many of the elderly I've seen have too much of their mind in the hereafter. But here is a woman, years beyond them, who is only thinking about life. Up until the day dies, she's going to go for it."

"I'm not retired, just tired," quipped Mae, who was born on Christmas Day in 1882. She said surgery was a snap.

President Reagan sent her a letter of recognition. She could read it without the aid of glasses.

A year ago, cataract surgery corrected the vision of her left eye to 20-20. Soon after, Mae wanted her other eye, which also had a cataract, operated on.

"She has a mind of her own. It was her decision to come to the hospital and have it done," said Dr. Horsley. "No one had to encourage her."

The operation was performed at the Clinton Hospital in Clinton, Mass. Dr. Horsley is also affiliated with the New England Memorial Hospital, where he is chief of ophthalmology.

The morning after the operation, Mae returned to Dr. Horsley's office to have the bandages removed. She sat in the examining chair, surrounded by church members, friends and nurses. She asked questions and carried on a lively conversation. All shared the dramatic moment when she read the chart, letter by letter, with the eye that had been partially blind for years.

As Dr. Horsley tested her restored sight, which improved over the next 24 hours to 20-20 vision, he said, "Many people get discouraged and give up in their later years. Because of impeded vision, they gradually drift away from the rest of society and cut themselves off. Mae is a source of inspiration. She lives for the present, she wants to live to her full poten-lying flat on their backs with sandbags to hold their heads still. The operation is performed under a powerful microscope. Through a small incision in the eye, the opaque part of the cataract is sucked out, leaving behind the capsule that held it in place. A clear new plastic lens, like a contact lens, is inserted the kids to play. Most of the other playgrounds we've used are right on a street — and you have to worry that the kids will get into trouble if they wander."

Safety is not the only appealing factor of the Simonds Park playground. Despite what at first might seem to an adult to be relative proximity to the Town Common and Route 3A, the playground is actually set well back from the road, and well-screened and insulated from the noise of trucks and autos, thanks to the terrain of intervening slopes and a grove of evergreens which provides coolness, shade, picnic tables and benches, and additional shelter from the noise and speed of the busy highway.

For Wilmington's Rachel

Robertson and Chelsea's Zachary Renna, an additional draw at Simonds Park is the little pool, whose wavelets look as blue as the Aegean, thanks to the azure paint on its walls and floor. There Rachel can splash among the waters while her mother, Angela, can dip or lave Zack, another of her charges for the day, if he seems inclined to want a little cooling.

Angela Robertson, a former, three-year resident of Burlington, said it is the excellent of the Simonds Park facility which brings her back, for the children's enjoyment and safety.

Chris Goucher, of Billerica, agreed as she made herself heard over the sound of the human-powered horseless carousel which you so often find in playgrounds. A youngster was propelling it by main effort, and the contraption issued a low, metallic groan, a little like an animal in pain.

Ms. Goucher added that another advantage to Simonds Park is that her eight-year-old son hasn't outgrown it yet: "I can just sit here, as well, and watch my daughters. It's a real clean park; it doesn't cost anything, and if I get hot, I can sit on the edge of the pool, fill a bucket and pour it over my head."

Chris Goucher was right about the cleanliness of the park. The grounds were, in fact, spotless that day — as were the restrooms.

But there's a beguiling dimension of imagination to the playground as well, especially the equipment.

One of the pieces of climbing apparatus is piping shaped in the form of stylized stagecoach and horse, in keeping with Burlington's colonial history and not-so-distant rural past.

Another is a rocket-shaped object, for hurdling, scrambling, or just sitting.

There is still the old tire on the chain, for swinging — a concept from generations past that is probably as old as rubber tires themselves.

And finally, in addition to other, traditional equipment, an update worth particular mention is a futuristic, abstract jungle gym, with plexiglass bubble-windows, ladders, spiral slide, and generally whacky, whimsical, and thoroughly enticing gyrations of imagination.

The Simonds Park playground has broad appeal for a range of ages, the adults and children concluded — from toddler to 10-year-old — as well as for the parent who just wants to bring his kids and, incidentally, soak his own head.

Cape bike trip to benefit Lung Association

Join the American Lung Association's Second Autumn Escape Bike Trek For Life And Breath on September 19, 20, 21 on Cape Cod. All abilities welcome.

What some trekkers said: "It was great. I enjoyed every minute of it," Brooke Monroe, Melrose.

"I had a great time...made a lot of new friends," Bob Makem, Lowell.

This year's trek will begin in Plymouth. From there, all will travel out across the Cape taking time to enjoy the Cape Cod Canal, the dunes of Truro and Wellfleet, the beauty of the National Seashore and the many towns and villages that make Cape Cod such an enchanting peninsula.

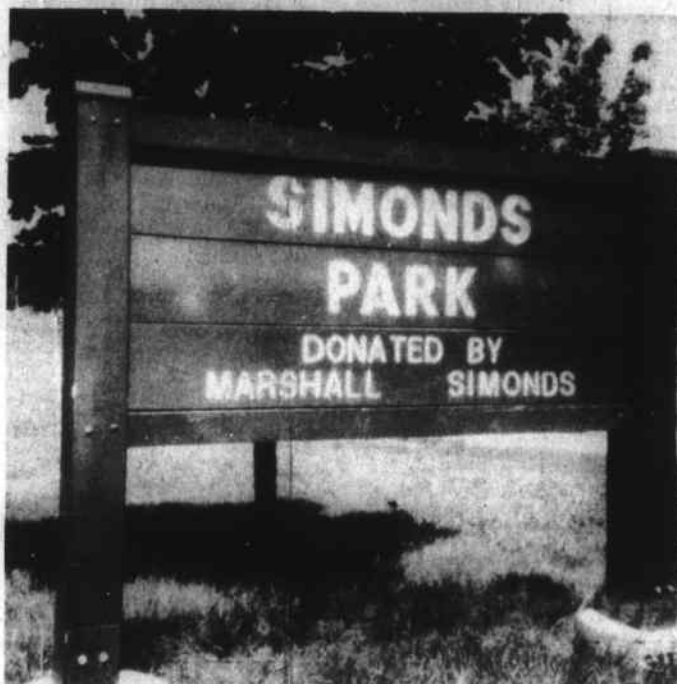

The Autumn Escape Bike Trek provides accommodations in Brewster and Sandwich, breakfast and dinners, including a Cape Cod clambake, a sage wagon to carry your gear, experienced leaders, detailed route maps and a communications and checkpoint team throughout the entire trek for safety and encouragement. The Bike Trek is not a race, you will be able to travel at your own pace throughout each of the days and take full advantage of the scenery of Cape Cod.

To register for the Autumn Escape Bike Trek, trekkers will be required to pay a $25 registration fee and raise a minimum of $250 in sponsored pledges prior to the event. Prizes, including two weekends for two, one at the Hotel Meridian, Boston, and one at the Embassy Suites, Cambridge, will be awarded as incentives to those cyclists who reach various fundraising levels. The Grand Prize is a five day trip for two to Bermuda.

Proceeds from the Autumn Escape Bike Trek will benefit the American Lung Association of Middlesex County, The Christmas Seal People. The Lung Association provides education, information and research designed to prevent and control lung disease.

For more information about the Autumn Escape Bike Trek, contact the American Lung Association of Middlesex County at 272-2866. 200 trekkers' capacity, so call today!

Volunteer drivers needed

The Eastern Middlesex Region of the American Red Cross urgently needs volunteer drivers to take clients to medical appointments, especially during the summer vacation months.

Drivers must be 18 years old and have a good driving record. Red Cross vehicles are usually available, although some volunteers prefer to use their own cars.

Those interested in helping in this capacity should call Janice Wilson, Office of Volunteers, 665-1351, for an interview.

into the capsule.

The sutures used to close the incision are about a quarter the thickness of a human hair. The incision, in Mae's case, was so small that only one suture was needed, Dr. Horsley said.

About four years ago, Dr. Horsley, after studying the procedure under Dr. William Harris, who developed the intraocular technique, introduced this operation at New England Memorial Hospital. New England Memorial became one of the few hospitals in the northeast at the time where the procedure could be done. Since then, this type of eye surgery, because of its high success rate and quick, comfortable recovery, has become increasingly popular in New England.

Mae, formerly a secretary to Dr. Haysmer at New England Memorial, said she was looking forward to attending the camp meeting at her church later this month. "I wish my legs were as good as my eyes," she said.

GREENPEACE WHALE WATCH

Greenpeace, the international environmental organization, continues its ninth season of whale watching through Oct. 11, as the whale population returns. "We had a slow start this year because the great whales had moved off Stellwagen," said Jackie Perry O'Connor, Greenpeace spokesperson, "but they're making up for it now. In the last three weeks we have sighted Humpbacks and Finbacks with their calves as well as Minkes, seabirds and lots of White-sided Dolphins."

Greenpeace sails every Saturday at 1:30 p.m. from Plymouth, Mass. to Stellwagen Bank, a popular Atlantic Ocean feeding ground for the Great Whales. "It looks like a wonderful late summer and fall whale watch season this year," said O'Connor. "I'm hopeful we'll sight the rare and endangered Right whale on its return to Cape Cod Bay."

To find out more about Greenpeace whale watches, write or call Greenpeace, 139 Main Street, Cambridge, Ma. 02141, telephone (617) 576-1650.

MAKE A DIFFERENCE

You can make the difference by opening your heart and home to a 15-to 18-year-old teenage student from another country who is eager to study at your local high school and learn about the American culture and life — about your life. You need only to provide room and board and a generous portion of tender-loving-care either for a school semester or a school year. The student will already have his or her own spending money, and insurances will be sufficiently covered. What do you benefit from this? Well, not only are you able to claim a $50.00 tax deduction for each month you host the student, but you will cultivate a life-long friendship. You will be able to say that you responsibly played a big part in another individual's cultural experience. You will feel proud that you made that difference. Please say YES today!!! Contact: Youth Exchange Service, 350 South Figueroa Street, Suite 257-P, Los Angeles, Calif. 90071, telephone 1-800-848-2121.

ALCOHOLICS ANONYMOUS

Can alcoholics be helped to stop drinking?

Today, more than 1,000,000 men and women are demonstrating by their personal example that alcoholism is an illness that can be arrested. These recovered problem drinkers are members of the unique fellowship of alcoholics — better known simply as A.A.

Men and women of all ages and from all walks of life have achieved sobriety by sharing the simple recovery program offered in A.A. Some are new members — others have not had a drink for 5-10-15-20 or more years. A.A. is not a religious movement. Many spiritual faiths are represented in the fellowship's membership in the United States, Canada, and more than 110 other countries.

A.A. is not affiliated with any other organization, agency, or movement. The fellowship is entirely self-supporting and accepts no outside contributions.

The Public Information Committee of Alcoholics Anonymous welcomes requests or inquiries from civic groups, schools, the clergy, medical and legal societies, etc., interested in obtaining information about A.A. Interested parties may contact the Public Information Committee at 426-9444 or write to Alcoholics Anonymous at 368 Congress Street, Boston, MA.

Northern Essex plans reunion

Remember President Bentley's weekly assemblies, freshmen beanies, Yankee Doodles, or the "pig farm"? If so, you were probably a student at Northern Essex Community College during the 60's.

As part of Northern Essex's year-long 25th anniversary celebration, the Alumni Association is planning a reunion for classes of the 60's on Friday, October 3 from 8 p.m. until midnight at the Haverhill Country Club. There will be dancing to music from the 60's and many familiar faces, including former faculty and administrators. Tickets are $10 per person; $18 per couple.

Unfortunately, addresses have changed, and the reunion committee, co-chaired by John Lyons '64 and Sandy Bayko '65, has had a difficult time reaching many alumni. If you attended Northern Essex in the 60's and haven't been contacted about the reunion or would like to help in locating lost alumni, please contact Ernie Greenslade, Director of Alumni Relations, at 374-3862.

Roving dan ferullo Tidbits from the past

FM TALK: Our gallivanting-around correspondent is on vacation this week. To keep you busy till he returns, he has left behind another edition of those offbeat tidbits on American history.

Yes, Ethel, there was a time when women were considered dumber than men. According to John S. Haller and Robin M. Haller, authors of "The Physician and Sexuality in Victorian America," many nineteenth century doctors believed women had less capacity to learn than men, and by keeping them dumb they were more likely to remain healthy.

In 1892 the Medical Record published a study which purported to demonstrate validity behind this belief held by so many physicians. One hundred and eighty-seven high school-aged girls were interviewed; 137 complained of headaches. The study concluded this was clear evidence that a woman's brain did not have the ability to go through rigorous academic training.

Other physical and mental ailments, including fatigue and depression, were often linked to too much education. According to the Hallers, some doctors actually believed that women, if they continued to strain their brains, would eventually develop many of the ailments that were generally considered to be associated with being a male, such as paralysis, insanity, alcoholism and crime. Feminists would have had a field day back then.

ACCORDING TO Janet Halliday Ervin, author of "The White House Cookbook," there used to be a list of ridiculous rules that White House guests had to follow. Among them: a gentleman was not permitted to stick his head out a window to acknowledge a female, however, if the female recognized him first, he was allowed to return a salutation; ladies were expected to sit far enough away from windows so as not to recognize or be recognized by passers-by; men and women were expected to be clean at all times, since cleanliness represented purity on the inside of the body as well as on the outside; men were not permitted to have long hair, since flowing locks were associated with poets and painters and were considered foolish-looking on all others.

JOSEPH KANE, author of "Facts About the Presidents," revealed a little-known fact about Grover Cleveland accepted the position as sheriff of Erie County, New York. One of his responsibilities was to hang convicted criminals. Cleveland was called upon twice to actually go through with the execution of a criminal. His duties included placing the noose around the neck, tightening the rope and then springing the trap door.

ONLY ONCE in U.S. history has real currency been recalled because of fake currency looking so real. It occurred in 1897, when counterfeit $100 bills began cropping up that were so real-looking the federal government recalled $26 million worth of real $100 bills.

WILLIAM MC KINLEY always carried a napkin around with him. The reason: his wife suffered from frequent epileptic seizures. When she would have a seizure in public, McKinley would throw the napkin over her face.

MC KINLEY HAD another superstition: he did not want to be the first president to leave the boundaries of the United States during his term in office. Whenever he took a walk on the bridge over Niagara Falls, which connects the U.S. with Canada, he made sure he went only halfway, then turned around.

THE STATE of Rhode Island had two capitals until 1900. Beside Providence, Newport shared the honor.

PROBABLY THE most unusual dinner party ever was thrown by a gentleman by the name of C.K.G. Billings. Everyone dined on horseback! It cost Billings $250 per person, most of which, it was reported, went to paying for the custom-made trays used to hold the food on the horses' backs.

IT IS hard to imagine Douglas MacArthur as a momma's boy, yet there was a time in his life when he was kidded as one. The reputation stuck in a good-natured way when young MacArthur entered West Point. His mother went along with him to make sure he studied. His mother didn't stay in the dormitory, of course. She rented an apartment right off campus.

THE SAYING "Nobody who has to ask what a yacht costs has any business owning one" is attributed to millionaire J.P. Morgan. He spoke it in response to a question asked about maintaining his yacht, the Corsair.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE eighty years makes: one Maxim Gorky and his wife were evicted from their apartment in New York City in 1906 because they could not prove to the landlord that they were lawfully wedded. These days a man could live with a sheep in an apartment in New York City and not attract attention from a landlord!

IN THAT same year, newly-elected Republican Senator Robert LaFollette was appointed to the Committee to Investigate the Condition of the Potomac River Front. What's so unusual about that? This committee had never met. In fact, this committee, to this columnist's knowledge, has never ever met.

HAVE YOU ever wondered where the popular phrase "Good to the last drop" came from? According to the General Foods Corporation, which makes Maxwell House coffee, Theodore Roosevelt coined the phrase after drinking a cup of Maxwell House coffee at Andrew Jackson's house, in Nashville, following a bear-hunting trip in 1907.

TEDDY ROOSEVELT loved to be at the center of attention, no matter where he found himself. His love for the spotlight prompted one of his sons to remark once: "When father goes to a wedding, he wants to be the bride; when he goes to a funeral, he wants to be the corpse."

THIS COLUMNIST has never seen a ball player as angry as Roger Clemens was following that bad call by an umpire during a recent game between the Red Sox and the Chicago White Sox. The Sox may have lost the game as a result of that miserable call by the official. It might make you feel better to consider this: in 1908, the New York Giants lost the pennant to the Chicago Cubs because Fred Merkle failed to touch second base as he rounded the bases. Roger, you may have lost the battle that night, but you have not lost the way yet.

IN 1909, SEARS-ROEBUCK advertised a horseless buggy in its catalogue that was, with proper care, "guaranteed to go 100 miles in 24 hours." Sounds like an ad for my used car.

IT WAS seventy years ago that the first self-service grocery store, called the Piggly Wiggly, opened its doors. The Piggly Wiggly had the right design: customers, once they entered the store, had to walk up and down every aisle before reaching the check-out counter.

SIGMUND FREUD once wrote a psychological profile of President Woodrow Wilson. Freud, even though he'd never even met Wilson, concluded that Wilson subconsciously identified himself with Jesus Christ.

THIS OPINION of Wilson was not shared by many of the public, who saw the president as a humanitarian. Wilson once raised $100,000 for the Red Cross by selling the wool of White House sheep, which the president had purchased to replace White House gardeners who'd been drafted into the army. "God gave me money." — John D. Rockefeller. Make it a good week.

Bullpen aces

BULLPEN, the Red Sox comedy by Steve Kluger now playing at the Hasty Pudding Theatre in Cambridge, has announced an extended run through September 7, with new performance times.

BULLPEN, a funny but touching slice-of-life, revolves around six unique veteran ballplayers who have been together for years. The comedy and the dramatic conflict come when they learn that a young "phenom" called "The Kid" is coming up from Pawtucket, and that one of them is going to get the axe.

BULLPEN got its start in Cambridge in January, 1985 with a staged reading at the American Repertory Theatre because of which it was recently named in "Best Plays of 1984-1985". It officially opened in Boston on June 24, 1986 after a sell-out Los Angeles run. The day before the Boston opening, another honor was bestowed upon the play. A

Red Cross Disaster Service

Ernie Bunker, Director of Disaster Services for the Mass Bay Red Cross, Eastern Middlesex Region, Melrose, wishes to thank the 14 Disaster volunteers for their assistance in providing the delivery of Disaster services. During the period of July 1, 1985 through June 30, 1986, these volunteers responded to 17 incidents assisting 20 families consisting of 63 individuals, and housed 12 families in hotels.

Since Disaster incidents can occur at any time of the day or night, there is a great need for individuals who have daytime and/or nighttime availability and wish to help provide assistance to victims of local disasters. If you would be interested in volunteering for Disaster Services in your area, call the office of Red Cross

Volunteers at 665-1351.

Quannapowitt Yacht Club race results

The Quannapowitt Yacht Club in Wakefield hosts six sailboat racing series throughout their sailing season which starts in April and ends in October. On July 20 the Early Summer Series which is the racing that happens on Lake Quannapowitt on Sundays, was completed and the winners have been announced. These champions have not only beat the competition, but the elements. The sailing is always varied on Lake Quannapowitt with strong winds for one race and another marked as a "real drifter" with barely enough wind to keep the boats moving. Each race tests the skill of the sailor and the competition is fierce. Rain fell on two of the Sundays, but the fleets kept racing.

And the winners for each of the seven fleets at QYC are: Laser — Bill Warren of Reading; Daysailer Blue — Steve Braese of Woburn; Daysailer White — Dennis Wagner of Reading; Mini 12 — John King of Reading; Mercury — Jerry Ross of Winchester; Force 5 — Ruth Warren of Reading; Daysailer Singlehanded — John Kerr of Reading.

The trophies are presented at the annual fall banquet, but these first place finishers are already too busy to wait for their trophies because the late summer series at QYC has just begun.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

To achieve high goals, dreams and noble purposes, one, like the marksman must aim a little higher than the mark. Robert Browning said it best, "Let your reach exceed your grasp, or what's a Heaven for?"

Here's the way my nephew Dennis Tully described a Red Sox game he attended last week, "Boy what a game! Both teams were tied for three hot dogs and two root beers. Then in the bottom of the second box of popcorn this guy hit a home run and the Sox then shut them out for the last two ice cream bars and three cotton candies; and here I am home, just in time for dinner."

My new car came with an "Air Tight," guarantee — if any of the air leaks out of the tires, it will be replaced free of charge. I asked the salesman, "what's the 24-40 warranty mean?" He smiled and said, "24 months or 40 FEET, whichever comes first."

If you would be popular, live so that a blind person would like you. Popularity, the lasting kind does not depend upon one's having a pretty face or being handsome. It's the inner qualities that are important. They communicate to others through media other than sight.

I signed up in April for a three month weight lifting and body building course, by mail. Every week I would receive a heavier weight. After three weeks I gave up doing the exercises but the weights kept coming. The course cost me two hundred dollars but didn't do a thing for me — but, you ought to see the muscles on Charlie Mullen, my mailman.

Most scientists don't believe in "luck." They swear by the "Law of probability." A sailor was running down Pigeon in the Boston Naval Shipyard only to see his ship, a destroyer, steaming full speed ahead out of the harbor. He returned to the Frazier Barracks where he was reprimanded and punished for missing his ship. Two days later the newspapers carried the somber news, "The USS Jacob Jones torpedoed, all hands but six lost!" "Do you believe in Luck? You bet I do!"

A "girdle" is an accessory after the "fat." The beach is buzzing these days, if you don't watch out you will be bowled over by runners, joggers or walkers. Phil Quinn and Warren Church of North Reading run every day. They completed the recent Boston Marathon, but came in so late they found the finish line by "Flashlight." Phil told me that most of the runners that tired look-like they heard one of my stupid jokes!

Any of you former Navy Yard workers remember Leo O'Brien, the machinist in charge of aligning ship propellers? Well he was noted for being a superb craftsman and also for having a quaint picturesque speech. Here are four samples of O'Briens endless supply, "I taught him everything I know and he's still stupid." My boy went swimming today. If he comes home drowned, I'll kill him." "I wouldn't buy one of those cars if you gave it to me for nothing." Leo asked a worker who he hadn't seen for sometime, "Was that you who was drowned last year or was it your brother?" Some of you may think that these "gems" are "nutty." Well, Leo O'Brien had one of the most "responsible jobs" in the Navy Yard.

He was literally a superman. He invented the alarm clock, the submarine, the parachute. He painted two of the greatest pictures the world has ever known. This incredible man was Leonardo da Vinci. He is perhaps best known today for two paintings, "The Last Supper," done on the wall of a church in Milan, Italy and the "Mona Lisa," which hangs in the Louvre in Paris. Many of you "Leftlanders" will be happy to know that Leonardo was one too. He arbitrarily learned how to write in his own way, which was right-to-left.

There is only one inventor in my family background and that's Uncle John Shea of North Reading, who invented the "Door Knocker." He was told that he was being considered for the "No-bell," prize. He exclaimed, "Oh, who gives a rap?"

Woodchips congratulates Christine Carey of Reading, a graduate of St. Elizabeth's Hospital School of Nursing and Mary Jane Morello of Tewksbury and Kathleen Sheehy of Wakefield, both graduates of Lawrence Memorial Hospital School of Nursing. I predict that someday soon, handsome young interns will say to each of these beautiful nurses, "Marry me, you're too beautiful for WARD-S."

Woodchips endorses the Exchange Student Program. It is the best way to bring understanding and lasting peace between the nations and people of the world. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fitzpatrick and their children, Amy, Michael and Hugh, Jr. of Tewksbury have had the pleasure of having Corine Galichet of St. Malo, France as an exchange student for a year.

Work stopped briefly at the Wilmington Post Office last week as Postmaster Jake Zalaski and personnel wished Sid Kaiser, a happy healthy retirement. In Sid's 37 years of service he has had every job in the office, even that of postmaster when the regular one was on vacation. One route as a letter carrier extended into Tewksbury and covered 16 miles, all on foot. My neighbor, Paul Rao retired two years ago and he still can't get used to drinking coffee on "his own time."

I told Fr. Burns of the Woburn Elks that his singing group sounds better when the bases are loaded.

I remember when my grandmother Ginny, had a little trouble sleeping, so unknown to her, my father put a little gin in a glass of warm milk. She sipped some milk slowly then drank a little more. Then as she finished it off a wide smile beamed on her face. She looked at me, winked her eye and said, "What a cow, what a cow!"

A modern mother it seems to me is one who can hold a cigarette and a safety pin in her mouth at the same time.

Folks, let me prove that we communicate with our bodies, especially our hands. Ask the first person you see after reading this chip to "describe a spiral stairway." I'll bet he or she will start twirling his or her fingers to help make it clear. The pursuit of happiness is not a race, it is an "attitude." Sometimes it's as simple as being satisfied with what you've got. A sign at a town meeting I attended said, "Due to the large number of items on the agenda please limit yourself to five minutes or five insults, whichever is shorter!"

Downeast adventure for local kids

DOWNEAST ADVENTURE When Suffolk University and Boston's Museum of Science co-sponsored a week-long marine science field experience at Suffolk's R.S. Friedman Station in Edmunds, Maine, some 26 youngsters took part in the program on the shores of Cobscook Bay in the Bay of Fundy. Included were Tim Kelley (2nd from left) 13, a seventh-grader from North Reading and Regan Gentner, 13, a seventh-grader at Stoneham Junior High School. They're pictured examining algae species as part of project with program counselors Paul Fontaine (left) of the Museum of Science and Carl Merrill of Suffolk University.

Twenty-six youngsters spent a week's marine science field experience on the shores of Northern Maine's Cobscook Bay as part of a joint offering by Suffolk University and Boston's Museum of Science July 6-12.

The participants, 13 to 16 years of age, came from throughout New England and included residents of Chapel Hill, North Carolina and Roswell, Georgia.

The program was presented at Suffolk University's R.S. Friedman Field Station in Edmunds, Maine directly on Cobscook Bay, the southernmost inlet of the Bay of Fundy. Suffolk has maintained the facility for marine biology programs for nearly 20 years.

The setting is known for its dramatic tidal fluctuations of more than 20 feet, greatest in the continental United States, as well as abundant wildlife. Bald eagles, osprey, seals and whales dwell alongside a rich assortment of marine invertebrates, fish and plants, a virtual treasure haven for marine biologists and science students.

Week's activities included marine and woodland field trips, discussion sessions and field and lab hands-on-activities to introduce students to marine studies. Carl Merrill, coordinator of the Suffolk field station, and Paul Fontaine and Kathleen Casey of the Museum of Science's marine science program directed the activities.

The youngsters were housed in cabins on the site and enjoyed meals prepared by the university kitchen staff and served in the dining hall overlooking Cobscook Bay.

In addition to observing eagles and seals in their natural settings, the group collected plankton and fish samples by boat, measured chemical and biological characteristics of seawater and viewed films.

The program also included trips to Campobello Island for a tour of the Roosevelt summer retreat as well as day visits to Hallowell Island, West Quoddy Head State Park and Eastport.

In addition to the Museum of Science Program, Suffolk University is sponsoring three weekly Elderhostel programs this summer at its Cobscook facility.

MCC offers Health, Travel, Hotel courses this fall

Middlesex Community College will offer three new certificate programs, Hotel and Restaurant Management, Travel Services Management and Health Careers, beginning in September 1986. The health careers certificate program will prepare students for general employment in the health fields while also assisting those students to prepare for a specialized health career if they do not have the required prerequisites, or they need academic help and support. Individual assistance in career counseling, selection of courses and the exploration of a variety of health careers will be provided by a program coordinator. Students can select courses in biology or medical terminology, anatomy and physiology or mathematics, and current issues in health as a preparation or introduction to other health career programs at the college.

Focusing on the rapidly growing hospitality industry, certificate programs in Hotel and Restaurant Management and Travel Services Management will include a cooperative field experience through which students earn academic credit for paid work experience in jobs related to their major. Course credits earned in the Hotel and Restaurant Management or Travel Services Management Certificate programs can be applied to the associate degree program in Business Administration.

Coursework in the Hotel and Restaurant program includes Hotel and Restaurant Management, Food and Beverage Management, Sales Principles, and a Hospitality Seminar.

Travel Services Management courses include Travel Agency Management, Travel Office Procedures, Conference and Convention Planning, and Sales Principles.

Full-time or part-time enrollment is available in any of these programs for September 1986. The college will accept applications throughout the summer for these and over 40 degree and certificate programs in the Liberal Arts, Business Administration, Health Careers or Technology areas. For information contact Middlesex Community College Admissions at 275-8910.

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

Flight of the Navigator

Flight of the Navigator starring Joey Cramer, Veronica Cartwright, Cliff DeYoung, Howard Hesseman, Matt Adler. Directed by Randal Kleiser. Produced by Robby Wald, Dimitri Villard. Screenplay by Michael Burton, Matt MacManus. Rated PG (mild profanity).

While past summer outings may have made Walt Disney roll over in his grave, this sultry season the Disney studio is on a roll. First, The Great Mouse Detective introduced kids to the kind of colorful, coordinated animation that their parents grew up on and now the studio has come out with Flight of the Navigator, a magical movie about space travel, time travel and intergalactic friendships.

Twelve-year-old David Freeman (Joey Cramer) is a typical pre-teen in looks, attitude and intelligence. What makes him unusual is that he's disappeared from his home in Florida for eight years, and he's done so without aging. The unraveling of this phenomenon is done not through backtracking, but through the ongoing discoveries of a young boy. Director Randal Kleiser treats us to a story filled with the wonderment of a child, as it is seen through a child's eyes.

Aside from the overall aura of delight and happiness exuded from this flick, Kleiser managed to round out the story so that there are no one-dimensional characters. Howard Hesseman is the NASA heavy, but even he's motivated through fear and disbelief, not just the usual avarice with which scientists are so often displayed. Hesseman also has a hard-boiled sense of humor that gives further depth to his character.

Of course, this film would fall flat if it weren't for the skill of young Cramer. He lacks the shiney, monotone delivery so common in pre-pubescent boys, and is instead a believable, sassy kid with a real gleam in his eye.

The alien gleams also, but his is more of an external shine. Credit is given to a fellow by the name of Paul Mall, but this intelligent life force sounds amazingly, almost suspiciously, like comedian Pee Wee Herman.

While this is technically a "family picture," adults should not be shy about seeing it, as Navigator has everything a summer flick needs: adventure, action, humor, bouncy tunes and a mean silver machine to cruise in.

Short Takes

Out of Bounds is a poor imitation of a Hitchcock-like thriller that conveys a convoluted tale of murder, mayhem and drug smuggling in Los Angeles. Hurting more than helping is Anthony Michael Hall, who may as well have been sleepwalking. Rated R.

Haunted Honeymoon is top-heavy with silliness, but a few funny bits and Dom Deluise in drag help even things out. While this comic romp through the horror flick genre won't rattle any bones, it's a pleasant enough - if forgettable - excursion. Rated PG.

Nothing in Common is a good title for this flick, as it bears little resemblance to the comedy we expect from stars Jackie Gleason and Tom Hanks. A woeful tale about divorce and the generation gap, it would have been less confusing, to the audience and the cast, if this were a clear cut comedy or a drama, but not a dramedy. Rated PG.

Howard the Duck couldn't make the transition from comic books to the silver screen without laying an egg. The cigar-chomping fowl was transformed into a cute, but bland, movie star and let loose in a ridiculous movie about fearsome aliens and an all-girl rock band. Rated PG.

Maximum Overdrive may be an improvement over most films based on Stephen King's stories, but it doesn't make it as serious entertainment. Scaremonger King directed this tale of machinery gone wild, but couldn't keep up the frightening momentum of the first 45 minutes, resulting in a decent drive-in flick, but only a fair-to-middling feature film. Rated R.

Pirates is a breathtakingly beautiful film that is generous with its detail and miserly with its action. A glorious reproduction of a 17th century galleon and Walter Matthau as a crusty blackguard of the Seven Seas are the highlights, but a pirate movie without any swash in its buckle is a dreary affair indeed. Rated PG-13.

Aliens is the kind of flick that will have you holding onto your popcorn and your date to keep you leaping out of your seat. An action-adventure-thriller, this sequel is more intensely scary than the original, and what plot flaws there are have been smoothed over with special effects and precisely timed shockers. Rated R.

About Last Night could be the signature film of love stories for this decade, as it deals with young people afraid of commitment. The language is as raw as the sentiment, but the

Shalom Emeth installs officers

The Sisterhood of Temple Shalom Emeth in Burlington is pleased to announce its officers for the 1986-87 year: President, Fran Parker of Burlington; Vice President of Fundraising, Janet Levy of Reading; Vice President of Membership, Debbie Mercier of Burlington; Vice President of Programs, Alese Clark of Billerica; Treasurer, Valerie Tobias of Burlington; Corresponding Secretary, Carol Getman of Burlington; Recording Secretary, Donna Davis of Burlington; Board of Directors, Jane Burnce of Woburn, Janice Goralnick and Cheryl Yakavonis of Burlington; Pre-Hebrew Coordinator, Betsy Yavitz of Billerica; Hospitality Chairpeople are Leslie Kern of Bedford, Ann Trebbly of Stoneham and Amy Weinstein of Burlington.

The Temple Shalom Emeth Sisterhood cordially invites interested women in the Burlington area to add their names to its mailing list so that humor alternates nicely between intelligent and intense. Rated R.

Big Trouble in Little China, a flick high on action and low on substance, is too convoluted and silly to be a decent dose of escapism. The funny concepts, such as Kurt Russell's parody of the macho American hero, is lost in a nearly indecipherable storyline. Rated PG-13.

Ruthless People is a fast paced, coarse, irreverent comedy that never loses its ability to make you laugh, even as the antics become more outrageous. A modernization of O. Henry's "Ransom of Red Chief," it's scurrilous Danny DeVito who refuses to pay two desperate young kidnappers to release his wife, a flashy, loud-mouthed Bette Midler. Rated R.

Running Scared doesn't make it as a good cops caper or as a comedy. There just isn't enough plot. However, Billy Crystal is surprisingly tough as a detective from Chicago, and Gregory Hines is funnier than you'd expect. It's too bad the direction and script couldn't match their pace. Rated R.

Legal Eagles is what Hollywood studios pray for. Three gorgeous, talented stars (Debra Winger, Daryl Hannah and Robert Redford) a funny, intelligent mainstream script and high production values. Commercial? Sure. But entertaining and absorbing? You bet. Rated PG.

RABBI SUSAN ABRAMSON, teacher Amy Kornetsky, and members of the five-year-old Pre-Hebrew class during its recent graduation ceremony at Temple Shalom Emeth in Burlington. Making this year's pre-Hebrew program the largest one ever are children from Bedford, Billerica, Burlington, Lowell, Reading, Stoneham, Tewksbury and Woburn. Registration is now taking place for the 1986-87 four and five-year-old weekly classes which are open to non-temple members. For information, please phone Temple Shalom Emeth at 272-2351 or pre-Hebrew coordinator Betsy Yavitz at 663-3271.

they can be notified of summer activities. For more information, please contact President Fran Parker at 272-8648 or phone the Temple at 272-2351.

Labyrinth is an aggressive, active fantasy that is the answer to every daydreamer's prayers. Jim Henson has created a perfect playland in which David Bowie is at his best as a dangerous goblin king amid a population of sophisticated puppets. Rated PG.

Ferris Bueller's Day Off is a giddy monument to those of us who like to take a few moments to enjoy life. Director John Hughes certainly hit comedic paydirt with Mathew Broderick as the truant teen who nimbly holds his own in an adult world. Rated PG.

The fattest known tree is a giant Sequoia over 83 feet in circumference.
